REMARKS

The schools throughout the district have been very satisfactory in most respects. The salaries of the teachers were raised as necessary, so that capable teachers were retained or others hired to fill the vacancies. Grades I-IV at Swanzey Center have been accommodated in the library building. The enrollment at the library and at No. 5 has been from 18 to 20 pupils in each school, and the same conditions will probably make the extra room necessary for next year.

The expenses for the year seem large but they have been in reality about the same as usual. The deficit was caused by the method which the state used in giving the State Aid. The towns are now divided into 3 classes, based upon current expenditures per $1,000, of equalized valuation in the towns. From 166 towns, 117 fall in Class A and are allotted regular distribution amounting to 95% of the entire sum to be given for aid. Swanzey is graded as the 126th town and thus falls with twenty-three others in group C. This group receives the remaining 5%. Our budget was cut down $1,500 by the State Board, and although our approved claims were $4,505.59, our percentage allowance was only $2,634.18. Therefore we have suggested that the town should raise the money to make up the deficit of $3,000.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT

To the School Board and citizens of Swanzey:

I hereby respectfully submit my first annual report as Superintendent of Schools.

My first care on taking charge of the Swanzey schools in September was to ascertain as accurately as possible how the schools ranked in actual accomplishment of the work that schools are supposed to do; in other words, to find out how the schools of this district compared, grade for grade, with schools in general throughout the country.

Up to within a few years practically all school systems have been run in a more or less haphazard fashion, with no means of knowing definitely whether or not they were really accomplishing what they should in the way of pupil instruction. It has been customary to build schoolhouses, equip them with furniture, books, and other supplies, hire teachers more or less properly qualified to teach, run the schools so many months per year, and then take for granted that the schools were functioning properly in the way of teaching the children the things they ought to know and developing in them the mental attitudes and habits of action requisite to social efficiency and good citizenship.

All too often this confidence has been misplaced. But until recently there seemed to be no way of checking up the work of the schools as we can measure the output of a factory. Neither was there any way of comparing directly the work done in one school system with that done in other school systems. This was due primarily to varying standards of grading among teachers and superintendents. Each teacher and each superintendent had his individual ideas on the subject and the standards of their particular teachers or supervisors were the ones which the schools of any particular locality were expected to achieve. Hence it came about that the schools in neighboring communities, and even within the same community, would vary greatly in efficiency due to lack of standardization of subject matter and grades. An eighth grade in one school might not be so far advanced in their studies as the sixth grade in another school, simply because there were no definite standards of accomplishment for any grade other than those of individual teachers and superintendents.

As a consequence, a community might easily become misled into the belief that it had excellent schools when in reality its schools were much below par as compared with those in other towns. Only when parents moved to other places and their children had to be put back a grade or two did they awake to the realization that there is a vast difference in the efficiency of schools in different communities even when one community spends as much or more on its schools as the others. Sometimes the town that is spending the most money on their schools is getting the least in the way of educational results.

But conditions have changed greatly in this respect during the past few years. It is no longer necessary to guess at what the schools are accomplishing, or how they compare with schools in other parts of the state or country. There is no longer any reason why any community cannot know just how its schools rank in comparison with schools in general in this country. We now have instruments with which we can measure the accomplishment of pupils from year to year, not in accordance with the judgment of particular teachers of superintendents, but in accordance with what the pupils in thousands of other schools have done. We can tell which schools are doing more and better work per year just as we can tell which of several factories are turning out the most pairs of high grade shoes or the most yards of fine cloth in a given time. Furthermore, we have definite standards of achievement for each grade in each school subject and can measure with a fair degree of accuracy, just how far any class or any individual pupil is behind or ahead of the grade standards. The efficiency of the teacher can be measured by the amount and quality of work she accomplishes, as indicated by the progress of her pupils, just as the efficiency of the woodchopper can be estimated by the number of cords of wood he can cut in a given time.

The instruments by means of which all these desirable things can be accomplished are standardized tests in the various school subjects. We know what hundreds of thousands of other children in many different schools have done with these same tests and we simply compare the work of the children in our schools with that of these other children. These instruments from the comparative measurement of classroom products are not yet perfected but, even so, they are by far the fairest and most accurate means yet found with which to measure learning and the efficiency of instruction. Early in the fall a survey of the schools of this district was made by means of standardized tests in order to ascertain the conditions existing at the beginning of the school year. In the first three grades the work was found to be up to standard. The five upper grades averaged about a year below standard in knowledge and skill in their respective subjects as compared, grade for grade, with elementary schools throughout the country.

These conditions were due for the most part, probably, to the lack of definite grade objectives on the part of both teachers and pupils and to the serious lack of textbooks and other teaching equipment. The lack of objectives, that is, the lack of definite standards of accomplishment for each grade is a condition that exists in most school systems wherein no provisions are made for measuring comparatively the products of the classroom.

There was a great lack of textbooks in all the schools. Many classes had no more than half enough books to go around even in the most fundamental subjects. There were not even enough arithmetics, grammars and geographies, and there were practically no spelling books at all. Neither were there any reading books for grades above the third, and not nearly enough for the lower grades. The histories were sadly out of date. This was also true of civics and physiology and hygiene tests. Because of lack of necessary books the pupils were greatly handicapped in trying to study, and teachers had to spend much valuable time in putting lessons on the blackboard instead of helping and instructing the children.

The lack of needed textbooks has been largely remedied. The conditions necessitated a much larger expenditure of textbooks than the district is accustomed to laying out in any one year. In considering this fact it should be remembered, (1), that the need for such expenditure was brought about by the failure to spend reasonably large amounts for textbooks in years past; (2), that the books were absolutely necessary if the schools were to accomplish results consistent with the amount of money already being spent on them, and if the time of the teachers and pupils was to be used to good advantages; (3), that, when the schools are once equipped with necessary textbooks, it will be five or six years at least, before further extensive purchases need be made. Not only do books wear out, but in this age of rapid progress, they get out of date and should be replaced every five or six years in any school system that pretends to be progressive, and to give the children the best educational advantages it can afford. In this connection, however, I may state that the purchases made this year were not to replace old books that might have been made to serve a while longer. Except in the case of some old histories and civics and geographies, they were for books that were needed and were entirely lacking. The needs of the schools in this respect are not yet fully met. It would take four or five hundred dollars more to properly equip them with texts needed to carry out the state program of studies. We also need a special appropriation for maps and globes. Geography cannot be taught efficiently without them. Yet they are either entirely lacking or so out of date as to be practically useless, in many of the classrooms.

It is too early in the year to do more than prophesy in regard to the results of measures taken to remedy the conditions revealed by the survey made in September. The midyear tests have just been completed and the pupils' scores tabulated. The graph records show on the average much more than normal progress for the first half-year, particularly in the schools where the teachers were quick to see the advantages offered by the standardized tests and to study the results of the tests with a view to making their work more effective. If anywhere near equal progress is made during the last half of the year, not only will a normal year's work be accomplished, but, in most schools, a large percentage of the arrears will be made up. Present indications are that the majority of children in all the schools will be found nearly or quite up to grade standards by the end of the year. The results in most schools are even better than I had hoped for. The tests are proving a mighty motivating influence in the work of teachers and pupils in schools where they are being used with interest and understanding.

It is my plan to give the tests in all schools three times a year. The September tests are to find out how the schools stand at the beginning of the school year. The midyear tests are to find out how the pupils are progressing in their school work and where there is failure to make proper progress so that there weak points can be given special attention for the last half of the year. In June the tests are given again for promotion purposes. In this way we can keep track of how the pupils are progressing in their studies as compared with the pupils of other school systems, and see wherein and to what extent the schools are succeeding or failing in their purpose. Permanent records are kept of the progress of every pupil by means of recording the results of the tests on graph cards, one of which for each child in the district is kept on file in the superintendent's office.

These cards show at a glance each child's standing in his or her studies at the beginning, at the middle, and at the end of the school year. Each teacher has copies of these cards for the pupils of her particular school.

The purpose of the whole scheme is to eliminate haphazard guesswork in the conduct of the communities most important and most expensive business, and to substitute therefor scientific accuracy in measurg the efficiency of that business so that everybody concerned may know just how the schools stand in point of efficiency at any time; that is, how they stand in regard to value received by the district for every dollar expended in comparison with the schools of other communities.

My own time and energy has been directed almost entirely so far in trying to get the schools up to national standards and in getting into operation a system of administration that will keep them there. It is only with the interested help of the teachers that superior results have been and can be accomplished, for after all, the teacher makes the school. The district can furnish the buildings and equipment, and the superintendent can plan and guide and help, yet, if the teacher falls down on her end of the job, failure is bound to result. Hence the need of wide-awake, progressive teachers, with broad views of their duties to the community and to the children whose future welfare is placed in their care.

The superintendent has asked much of the teachers during the past few months. He has asked for special effort, for extra work, and for intelligent cooperation in much that was new to them in the way of plans and methods. In most cases the things he has asked for have been given cheerfully and effectively. This spirit of cooperation and progressiveness is appreciated.

In concluding I want to express my appreciation and thanks to the members of the school board for their interest in my work and their help in meeting the difficulties of the situation as I found it. I request their continued cooperation and that of the citizens of Swanzey in my plans to make the schools of this district the very best that can be had for the money. In return I pledge my best services to that end.

Respectfully submitted,

SAMUEL S. BROOKS,

Superintendent.
